CONTRIBUTORS - Martin Bellin Roger Rado

Anyway, Billy said I was meant to do the introduction but I'd already done three other things and I was supposed to be taking Betty to the pictures cos I always do on a Monday and anyway, I mean I'm not really one for doing introductions so I said to him why don't you get your big sister to do it cos Mrs Partridge (she's one of Tommy's mum's friends) said that his Elsie was good with words and that but Billy said to me he thinks I should do it cos all the things that I'd done were dead little but I told him they'd took us ages and they were dead funny, at least that's what his dad reckoned, so I said to him, right Billy, I'm not gonna do it unless you help me and it's about time your Daddy did something else so I think he's gonna type it out.

WITH NAYLOR HAMMOND, Esq.

THE NAVY

Well, as you probably know, the Navy has been as much a part of Britain's history as indeed it is today.
The Romans began it all by building Viking longboats to patrol Hadrian's wall in the Lake District. Nelson was Britain's greatest ever present day
Admiral, and he coined the immortal phrase 'Britannia rules the waves' at a Tea Party in Boston. He won a series of Napoleonic wars or Aircraft carriers as they are known before being shot on deck by a Frenchman called Harty whom he had asked for a kiss.
The list of sea dogs is endless;
Columbus, Darwin, Somington and Cousteau; they were all famous ship's pets until dogs were banned from the Navy under the strict rabies laws.
In the early days ships were made of rope and were rowed by a crew of slaves known as 'press gangs'. They used gang planks until ears were invented by Sir Walter Raleigh who also discovered the bicycle.
Many of our largest vessels were built at Portsmouth, a large 'breakers yard' near Sheffield. The best known was 'Ark Royal', the Queen's private yacht, which was used in the TV series 'Triangle', a documentary about life on the Queen's Line starring Edward Heath as Captain Birdseye. The theme tune, 'Sailing' by the Village People, was a top ten hit on pirate radio stations like Radio One, which use large boats to broadcast with, hence their name.
Blue Peter, so named because of his blue beard, was a pirate. His ship, the Jolly Roger, was sunk by the Welsh vessel 'Bismark', a 'U' boat, during the cod war. The Welsh navy now use
'polaris' type ships like Rainbow
Warrior in their bid to defend Whales.
Submarines were invented purely by chance when the captain of HMS Titanic saw his vessel to avoid a german iceberg during the war. Since then submarines have taken over from the out date ships, which have now become largely a thing of the past.
One ship, SS Nelson's Column, has been preserved and is on show at Nelson's birthplace, Trafalgar Square, which is in Portsmouth.

See you next time!

Terror On Platform 13

A violent nightmare in Blood!

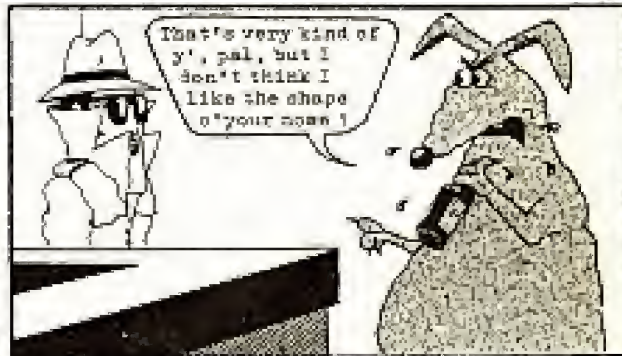

Platform 13 was an isolated oil rig 100 miles off the coast of Scotland. For several weeks the crew had heard terrifying noises coming from the deep dark waters below them, and in a series of late night attacks security guards had suffered broken noses as they stood guard over the rig.

Rumour had it that a huge beast was at large beneath the platform. Then, one cold winter evening, as the workers were relaxing in the bar, they heard a chilling scream from outside, and then the room began to shake. A large claw pierced the wall ...

No sooner than the giant rat had appeared, private detective Ted Dempster was on his way to Scotland, armed with a bottle of whisky. But this was no ordinary bottle of whisky. It was a special bottle of whisky topped up with a deadly combination of shampoo and rat poison.

Amazingly, Dempster was unscathed despite the rat's violent heeler. As he bundled the bully away, he explained why...

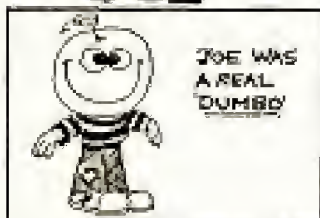

The rat drank my whisky which contained very special shampoo, which, when taken internally, produces an instant curly perm. The rat's new hairdo absorbed all the power from his butt, leaving me unharmed!

OLD JOKE

'I KILLED A LION & WAS SHOT BY A TANK'

By LEWIS COLLINS

Life as a T.V. Tough Guy

On telly I always play the tough guy - perhaps it's because of my tough background.

The day I was born my dad, who had a drink problem, tried to kill me with a mallet. He ended up in hospital for 3 months. That was my first scrap, and somehow I knew it wouldn't be my last.

HAMMER

At school all the kids used to call me "LEWIS" because of my unfortunate christian name. I really hated it. On one occasion I broke my best friend's legs with her desk for calling me that. I was quite a tearaway at school and got cased every day. It never hurt but one day I broke the headmaster's pelvis with a ten pound hammer for calling me names.

I joined the SAS straight from boy scouts - not that there's anything wrong with the scouts. I just wanted to kill some bloody foreigners, not play silly games and go camping. On my first day fighting in the jungles of Malaysia I killed 200 soldiers. I remember because I jammed my machine gun and had to bite them all to death, even though I'd lost all my teeth eating bricks when I was a kid.

In an interview with JAKE JOWLER

When I left the army I got my first job on telly doing a commercial for Lion Bars. I was working with a lion called Sheba. It may have been tame but it weighed 8 tons and had 12 inch teeth. One day we were filming when it went wild and attacked the film crew. I tried to calm it down by stroking it but I accidentally snapped it in half.

Another hairy experience occurred when I was filming a war sequence for a telly film. I was being chased by a tank, but someone had forgotten to load it with black shells. The next thing you know it fired and I felt an enormous explosion on my head. I had been hit full in the face by a shell. I remember having a black eye for 2 days after that.

STUNTS

I do all my own stunts for telly. I remember once I was staging a fight with a stunt man who weighed in at 26 stone. I had to throw him through a window, but I missed and he hit a Boeing 747 that was flying overhead. They never managed to find him, although I managed to catch the aeroplane before it crashed.

BOY IN HUMAN TORCH HORROR

By Sid Sensation

A gruesome game ended in disaster for 3 year old human torch terror victim Tommy Thompson.

MATCHES

Tiny tot Tommy was playing at his home near a box of matches when he swallowed a battery which he had removed from his brothers pocket calculator.

HOSPITAL

A doctor at the hospital where Tommy was treated said the battery was removed from Tom's tummy without difficulty, and he agreed that Tommy was similar to a torch in that there had been a battery inside him.

WOMBAT WINS! BUT BOTHER SOON BEGINS

Dorothy Terry Wombat, 16, thought he was a winner when his pretty wife told him he had won the pools. Terry, 46, wasted no time in opening an account at a local department store and bought goods worth a total of £875,000, including a yacht, 7 cars, a pink coat and assorted jewellery for his wife, 12 persian carpets, a washing machine and a private aircraft.

But it wasn't long before spendthrift Terry's feet were firmly back on the ground. For when he got his shopping back to the couple's council owned semi in Willichsby Road, Manchester, his wife explained that his winning cheque was for £1.76 only!

FOR

A spokesman for Vernon's Pools Ltd said there was nothing they could do. "Mr Wombat's coupon has been checked and he is only entitled to £1.76".

Mrs Wombat, who was a runner-up in the Miss Greater Manchester contest 26 years ago, was able to look on the bright side.

"Perhaps I should have told Terry how much we had won" she told us.

"I feel a bit of a nit-wit with all these expensive items lying in the back yard unpaid for."

But the story has a happy ending. For Tommy Smith, manager of the store where Terry's spending spree took place, has decided to let Terry keep everything he bought - free of charge, providing Terry agreed to be more careful in future. "I think he's learnt his lesson" said Tommy at his city centre store yesterday.

Addiction Almost Killed The 'King Of Glam'

For Gary Glitter, crowned the King of Glam during the star-spangled seventies, fame and fortune turned out to be too hot to handle.

SMASH HITS

After a string of chartbusting smash hits, Gary, like so many pop stars, fell foul to temptation and became a 'junky', an addict, and he fell from fame almost as quickly as he had emerged.

GIG

We spoke to Gary at a comeback gig which he recently played in Newcastle. He told us how the hits had run out in the late seventies, and how he had found himself flat broke after 5 years of stardom. Now that he is back in business he vows that he will never eat again.

"Then I think of all the money I ate away it makes me cry", he says. "It all began when a friend suggested I should start eating Peles in an effort to give up cigarettes. Then it was Mars Bars, then pasties and pie".

"I remember sitting in the dressing room after a gig in London and this guy was passing round a chocolate cake. I tried a bit, just for a laugh, and it seemed like a good thing. A few days later I went out and bought a cake for myself, and soon I was eating up to a dozen cakes a day."

HOOKED

"You just don't realise what's happening to you until it's too late. I was hooked. I couldn't go on stage without a few cakes or sausage rolls inside me. I began losing sleep and my personality completely changed. I became irritable and short tempered. My figure was a mess. At one stage I weighed 35 stone. I would suffer terrible withdrawal symptoms if I couldn't get food. I even smashed up a hotel room because I couldn't fit through the door."

'BIG T'

Gary's face is grim as he recalls this awful chapter of his life. He told us how, at a showbiz party, he was offered trifle.

"I was given a plate of cream and jelly and sponge cake, with fruit all over it. That was it. The big 'T'. I was main-lining. My friends gave me only weeks to live. I knew I had to do something. I had to kick the habit."

COLD TURKEY

Gary's manager suggested he should try the 'cold turkey' treatment. As Gary recalled, this was a disaster.

"I went out and ate ten frozen turkeys at once. I ended up in hospital having my stomach pumped, but that was the turning point. I was transferred to a food addiction unit. The next two weeks were like a nightmare. I was only allowed one piece of lettuce per day. Eventually things began to improve, and I was allowed home, but my life was in ruins. The success, the stardom, the money. It had all gone."

Gary was left with the task of starting out all over again, however, his comeback is proving to be a big success. In these days of boring fashion and falling record sales, Gary can provide a breath of fresh air with his outrageous showmanship and his spectacular stomping stage shoes.

SUCCESS

And you can be sure that during his new found success, Gary will be steering well clear of any fatty food stuffs.

A final word from Gary. "If you're ever at a party and someone offers you food - no matter how few calories - leave the room."

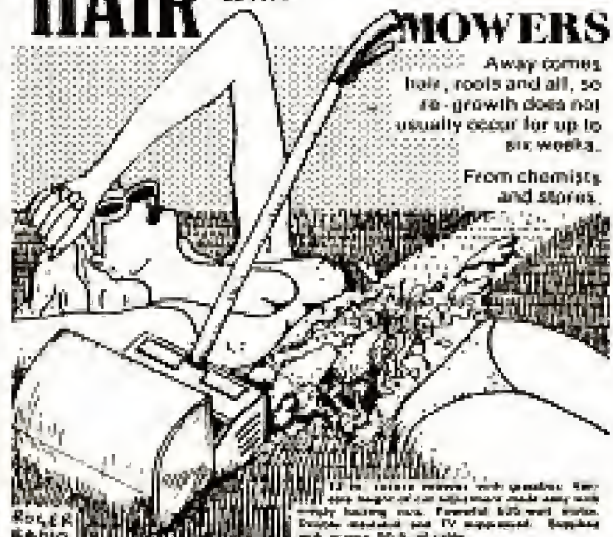

Gary asked us to mention that you can join his fan club by sending £1.50 plus four set class stamps to:

MORAL: A WINDOW WITH A TIE CAN STILL BE RASSED

A LIFE IN THE DAY OF WAVIS O'SHAVE

Every morning I rise at 5.45 when the Rising Bell rings. Being a Nebbist Popstar means that the only way to remain true to your fans is not to have any, and so, nonexistence!

Morning prayer is at six o'clock, and I repeat the collective recitation of the esoteric Nebbist formula - 'Being born is the lowest, cheapest way of attracting attention to oneself'. 'Consultant psychiatrists apart, the whole of the world's population are schizophrenics'. 'Anything can happen since Scotland drew with Iran'.

Breakfast at seven is followed by Group Meditation at eight. Today's theme: 'The truth is that there is nothing to do in earthly life other than waiting to go bald, to indulge in fantasy, show dissention, and take the dog for a walk. p.s. Buddha was a crank'.

9.00 - Work

12.30 a.m. Lunch

The afternoon is filled up with interviews with Iana Akonk Noota.

At five o'clock we have Group meditation, with the theme of 'life is naught but going down the plughole to come back out of the tap'. At 6.30 we have soup.

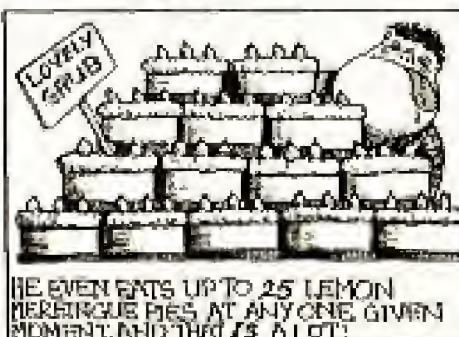

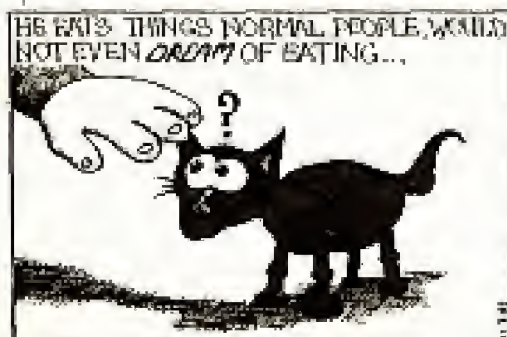

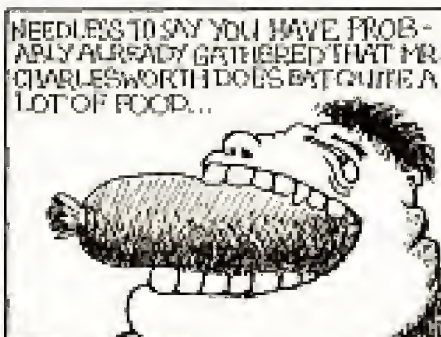

By eight o'clock it is time for Evening prayer and mystical Nebbist revelations disclosed from Tibetan hermits under threats of severe GBH. These include: the world started in 1932 and history is a hoax; The pyramids were built to enable Egyptians to scale the sides to the top to avoid nasty sandstorms; Geoff Hurst's third goal in the 1966 world cup final was not over the line; The Russians are presently beating backshe into the West; All professional wrestling bouts are probably fixed.

Bedtime is at ten o'clock. Tonight's choice of compromising dreams allowed concern the following: Meditation on a Lotus petal/ Meditation on salvation/ Meditation on Toyah Willcox's lovely thighs.

Wavis relaxes before meditation

Aged between 27, Wavis O'Shave is best known for his album 'Anna Ford's Sun'. He is a popstar and a devout Nebbist. His favourite football team is Glasgow Celtic, and he is very mental.

VIZ IS TOPS SAYS BOB

By VIZ REPORTERS

Two months ago life was looking pretty grim for unemployed car mechanic Bob Jones, 45.

FUN

That was until Bob, 46, happened to buy a copy of Vix Comic after newspaper Terry Jackson had recommended it. Terry told Bob that Vix was a winner—and fun for the whole family.

JOB

Bob took the comic home, and the next day, he got a job.

PRETTY

Bob's pretty wife wouldn't miss Vix for the earth. She told us how after she had read a copy she regained her eyesight which she had lost in a car crash years ago.

MIRACLE

And not long after Bob had placed a regular order for Vix, his 5 year old crippled nephew, who specialists had given only seconds to live, was miraculously cured, and won the pools the next day.

FORTUNE

And while Bob and family were celebrating, they heard that a distant aunt had died, leaving them a fortune.

On hearing the good news, Bob's wife, Carol, 42, who had been sterile since her car crash, gave birth to triplets.

Bob - It's a winner

Yesterday Bob told us that Carol and the kids were all doing well, and looking forward to cashing their £500,000 premium bonds jackpot which had arrived that morning.

WINNER

So if you're looking for a little sunshine in your life, buy Vix! It's a winner!!

A final word from Bob - "I would recommend Vix to anyone - it's a real fun value winner - for all the family".

Talking Sense with Charlie Pontoon

MAN THAT MATTERS in the COLUMN WITH A KICK as well

Isn't it about time we gave the bobby on the beat a shooter? Let's face it, kids will be kids, and they're always gunnu take pot shots at the old Bill. Why not get the coppers toned up, so if they're gunnu get wasted, at least they can take a few villains with 'em when they go.

I hear they're gunnu give us breakfast TV. What we need is a new channel. There's never any action on BBC2. It's dead dull and boring. We don't want more chat. We want action and sex.

What's all this crap about conservation? What would you rather have? A tree or a box of matches. Give me a box of matches any day. And I'd rather the wife had a nice fur coat than have bloody heavers all over the place, making a mess of your car when you clobber one on those stupid little narrow country roads. Think how many pile-ups you could avoid by getting rid of all these bloody trees and hedges.

If you've seen one tree you've seen 'em all.

And what's all this about saving whales? I hate whales. They're just crap. They just float about pissing out the top of their heads.

And who the hell are the GND? They tell us that everyone in Switzerland has got a bomb shelter. That figures. Last time the shit hit the fan they were all hiding in their bloody bunk vaults leaving us to deal with the fun. The trouble with those chiks is they're too yellow to put the heat in.
